KEYNOTE AND WORKSHOP TOPICS

THE TRAUMA-INFORMED COURTROOM: As the old TV program used to say, “There’s a million stories in the naked city.” And for people who end up in court, the story often involves trauma to varying degrees. What can courts do to reduce “jurigenic” harm – making people worse off because of interactions with the justice system? This interactive program answers those and many other questions for judges, counsel and court personnel.

JUDICIAL ETHICS: Treatment courts focus on recovery and accountability of persons with substance use disorders/mental health issues. Because of their collaborative nature, there are ethical landmines about which judges must be aware to avoid unethical behavior. This program reviews the situations in which the judge may make missteps and cross the ethical line. This is a practical guide to ethical behavior in treatment courts.

PROCEDURAL JUSTICE & THERAPEUTIC JURISPRUDENCE: Research has shown, Procedural Justice (PJ) and Therapeutic Jurisprudence (TJ) increase the likelihood of compliance with court orders, and provide an increased level of trust and confidence in the judiciary. This course is a primer on both TJ and PJ that will lead to better outcomes in your court cases.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING

Judge Peggy F. Hora's (Ret.) innovative thinking has been sought not only by judges but by government officials throughout the world. "No" and "impossible" are words not known to her. She rocks!!
